Some organisations have an international working environment, some have a real Dutch culture. Are you an international student and in doubt whether to apply as a non-Dutch speaker to an employer in the Netherlands?

What to do:

- ➔ Check the company recruitment-pages;
- ➔ Call the recruiter of the company and ask him or her this question;
- ➔ Check if they advertise in English or in Dutch. It is more likely that the company is willing to receive international applications when they advertise in English.

How to find vacancies:

- ➔ Vacancies are often widely promoted on the web but can always at least be found on the company website. An easy way to stay informed is to subscribe yourself to the company's career newsletter;
- ➔ Create a so called jobalert on the company website;
- ➔ Follow companies you would like to work for on social media like Twitter, Facebook, LinkedIn, Youtube, etc.;
- ➔ When you get an invitation for a job interview it might also be helpful to read the latest posts about actual developments at the company;
- ➔ Through search engines (please turn over).

Search Engines

Search Engines help you find vacancies on the internet. One that is really easy to use is Indeed.nl. It covers a large number of the vacancies published anywhere on the web. The only things you need to fill in are your search keywords and the place you are searching. 'Indeed' also has search engines available in several other countries.

You can also place your CV on search engines, but be careful with your privacy.
